

To whom it may concern,

I am writting to you regarding the 1994 Communications Assistance for Law Enforcement Act (CALEA). I am concerned because of the possible misuse of such a mandate. You see, currently I am attempting to file for motions of discovery on at least 7 federal agents due to the misuse of their federal badge. What types of oversight is involved in guaranteeing that this type of thing will not be abused due to overzealous employees?

I am certain that if measures of oversight to protect my fundamental right to privacy and the right to live without having federal employees use my past experiences to take away my freedoms, and use it as a method of discrediting myself, I would be able to support such a measure. As it stands now, I cannot condone this power being given to agents who would use it to sentence a person to slow death for profit.

Thanks for your time,
Jason Gerfen
jlgerfen@hotmail.com